

Thinking differently about ... Leadership and effective decision making

Education leaders have to battle against swift and unrelenting change and emotional pressures from both inside and outside the workplace. This forces us into decision making that can be made too quickly and lacks sustainability. This type of thinking is natural and needs to be addressed in a structured way.

This training will:

- Increase your understanding of the thinking needed to make effective and sustainable decisions
- Give you the practical tools to apply these thinking processes
- Help you solve current problems
- Assist in generating fresh ideas
- Enable you to identify your decision-making strengths and what to develop
- Encourage you to work with others on their problems and yours
- Help you utilise established strategies alongside new approaches

These training sessions work best if you can bring a personal leadership challenge with you. This will enable you to apply the work we cover to an issue that could be concerning you. However, you are under no obligation.
